Abstract

About My Own Rights is a human rights project aimed to bring awareness of the basic rights of college going women in a rural town of Andhra Pradesh, India. The project was carried out in India during April 2018 incorporating a participatory method based on two dimensions: to understand the women's challenges and make them aware of their rights. The project's main intention was to educate the college going women about rights and it was found that the girls had low levels of knowledge of rights therefore necessitating to empower the participants by making them aware of their basic rights. The project has been successful in voicing out their gender specific challenges in relation to human rights and bringing awareness of their rights and legal provisions.
